Nationhood and the Indian Subcontinent

Contemporary
Cultural Reflections

Edited by
Himadri Lahiri &
Srideep Mukherjee

This volume explores the concept of nation, the practices of nationalism, and contestations over citizenship in the Indian subcontinent. Contributors from the region examine the challenges faced by citizens, non-citizens, individuals with disabilities, and women as represented in literature, film, and mass media. They trace the evolution of phenomena such as ascetic masculinity, statelessness, gendered consciousness, and hypernationalism. The book envisages the promotion of democratic and secular values, resistance to autocratic trends, and people-to-people contacts in the Indian subcontinent.
