FOREWORD

It is our pleasure to publish the Second Rabindranath Tagore Memorial Lecture delivered by Dr. Ketaki Kushari Dyson on 23rd March, 2011. This event also coincided with the year-long celebration of Tagore's sesquicentennial birth anniversary.

Dr. Kushari Dyson is a popular and prolific writer of poetry, novels, fictions, plays, essays and research articles both in the Bengali and English literary domains. She also translates "between the two languages, in both directions". A wide space of her field of research is occupied by Tagore which encompasses translation of selected poems of Tagore, the legendary interaction of Tagore and Victoria Ocampo and studies on Tagore's colour vision and his use of colour in his writings. These works have brought her numerous accolades including Ananda Puraskar- in the years 1986 and 1997.

I am thankful to Professor Debnarayan Modak, Director, Dr. Manan Kumar Mandal, Asstt. Professor and their colleagues of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences - for publishing this scholarly Lecture in time.

Development grant received from the Distance Education Council, New Delhi has been utilized to cover-up partially the cost of this publication.
